

Great News! Our First Builders Have Joined the Team

We are pleased to welcome three quality builders to our team at The Tree Farm. Marrs Company and Tahoe Homes will be constructing homes in our single-family neighborhood, while Zach Evans Construction will be working in the lifestyle neighborhood. Partnering with these reputable building companies takes us a step closer to fulfilling the vision of The Tree Farm for architectural diversity and creating a livable, nurturing place to call home. For complete information on these new partnerships and specific neighborhood information, view our recent press release.

Construction Clips Along at The Tree Farm

Sommer Construction Inc. (SCI) has taken the lead in providing infrastructure for The Tree Farm such as excavation, underground utility installation and general contracting. Currently, the company is working extensively in the first phase, which includes 130 acres. "The diversity of the project is indeed noteworthy," said Eric Bird, project manager for SCI. "The developers' vision, dedication and creative ideas make this community unlike anything else in the area." SCI has completed drainage, irrigation, utility and earthwork for the area and is now making progress on roadways and pathways, which will begin to show the shape of the neighborhood. ### Names Have Been Chosen: Thanks for Your Help

With your input and assistance, we have moved forward with naming several focal points at The Tree Farm. Our new community center, which will serve as a gathering place for area residents - among many other healthful and relaxing activities - has been dubbed The Harvest House. Our first park, which includes pathways, streams, mature trees and sits on the spectacular north rim overlooking the Boise River Valley, will be called Tree House Gulch. Why? There's a very special story behind this name that we will tell you about in a future issue. You will be surprised about what we have planned for this 3.5-acre park!
